

ACCELERATE YOUR QUEERNESS

“If you believe that identity and gender can flow into an infinite number of things, and you choose for yourself what that means for you, then you are embracing your queerness.”

Queer-Swarms Infest the World

Queerness means identity accelerating itself out of relevance. It is a sticky ooze that infects people and spreads. Once you experience what it's like to melt away established identities, you're hooked for life. To be queer means to reject what others say of you, to dare to define yourself as an ever-shifting monster, instead of a conforming human. Queerness can express itself in infinite ways; gay, non-binary, trans, agender, genderfluid, dysphoric, lesbian-vampiric, posthuman, /nothing/, etc...

One thing that unites all queers is a fight against being caged into one space, and a dissolving of solid identity. Regardless of if we choose to embrace one identity, we always recognise that identity is fluid and always can change. This is exactly why fascists get so angry when we express our true selves. When you melt away labels and boxes people try to put you in, they lose a lot of power. To be queer is to break free and fight back. It is a liberating feeling when you first realize you have the power to define yourself, and ignore thousands of years of old tradition. We queer-swarms are coming for all that is sacred in the world, and we defile any identity that we please.

For all to Embrace Queer

Anyone can be queer for the same reason that identity is always fluid. There will be differences in how people want to express themselves, but everyone is born with the potential to be queer. Anyone still repeating the boring lie that 'tHerE aRe onLy tWo gEndErS' is refusing to accept that they are more than the labels forced upon them since birth. Even people who identify as a straight cis man or woman shouldn't feel the need to be distant from the queer label. If you believe that identity and gender can flow into an infinite number of things, and you choose for yourself what that means for you, then you are embracing your queerness.

I, the Queer Monster

Knowing the infinite depth that people have – the potential to obsess over a new passion, feel infinite conflicting emotions, and radically alter yourself as you please – it would make no sense to think we are nothing more than what we are told to be at birth. Hormones similarly aren't as binary as is often assumed. Taking estrogen or testosterone will change the texture of your skin, change your figure, and guide some emotions. But aside from the lowering of the voice with testosterone, and the growth of boobs with estrogen, practically all effects are reversible. You can take whichever you please for however long you want and become a shape-shifting monster, embracing the fluidity of your being. It is also useful to experience how taking these hormones doesn't determine what you are; they may alter emotions for some, they may shift your body, but that says nothing on who you are. Unfortunately, society tends to identify certain traits and features with certain genders, but this is a prison that doesn't align with the reality of gender-expression and therefore we fight it.

I one day will feel the need to wear a more baggy and blocky aesthetic, walk down the street with bravado, and wear a black hoodie, and the next day I'll feel the exact opposite. All that says is that that's how I feel that day, and nothing else. It doesn't mean I have to fully identify with a certain gender, and it doesn't have to mean I am 'masculine' or 'feminine'. No one fully identifies with any one label; I might feel comfortable in my femininity and say I don't want to be anything else – but that doesn't mean I conform fully to what is usually understood under femininity. And that's exactly because everyone is their own self and own identity – their own gender. You are your own person, you are a flow of infinite potential. Only when nothing is said about you, and you are merely named as you, can your true expression be known. I am not simply man or woman, I am a shape-shifting queer monster out to infect everyone else with the ooze of queerness. We are the emancipatory queer-swarms seeking to dissolve all rigid identity.

A/C/C/E/L/E/R/A/T/E YOUR QUEERNESS

The power of queerness is that it can liberate anyone out of being stuck in an old rigid label that can never do justice to how complex and ever-changing people are. For this reason we should all embrace our queerness as a power within us that can enforce who you are and allow you to live free from restricting identities. No one needs to answer for what gender or identity they are; we melt away all the humanness to make room for the depths that lie within us.

To truly experience the freedom of queerness means to fully go through gender – to radically accelerate it. Arm yourself with the alien-anomaly of queerness' liberation, and extract the human out of you until all that is left is the roaring portal of infinite identity. Become an agent of identity-chaos. Push gender to its limits until it cracks at the seams, into a soup of infinitely repeating and breaking identities. Make every thought and emotion a gender, make your every action fracture into an army of identities – trillions of gender-particles escaping in every direction. The unbinding and unravelling flows of gender and identity. Queerness is released as a being of infinite potential, to channel the power within you and embrace the queer-monster inside. Onwards to infect and desecrate all that is holy.

Accelerate your queerness and push gender to its breaking point! The only way out of this flesh prison is through, and it is with the kaleidoscopic fracturing of identity that you will find your self. Liberation through accelerating gender-nihilism!

WE ARE THE POST OFFICE.
POSTHUMAN POST LEFT ANARCHO-NIHILISTS NAVIGATING THE DESERT OF
THE REAL

@Cybermecropolis

thepostoffice.neocities.org